London, February 14.

Yesterday arrived a Mail from Holland, and one from France.

Paris, February 18.

UPON the Cardinal du Bois's resigning the Employment of Councillour of State, the Abbot de Ravannes succeeds him in that Dignity. Deputies are arrived here from Languedoc, to represent to the Court the great Prejudice of the Inhabitants of that Country by the Lines that have been drawn lately there for the better preventing the Communication of the Plague; and 'tis believed that some Alterations will be made on that Subject. The Advices from that Country concerning the Distemper continue favourable. It is said the Marshal d'Uxelles designs to follow the Example of M. Pelletier de Souzy, to retire into a Convent and pass the remainder of his Life in Devotion. The Advices relating to the Plague say, the Disinfecting of Places and Removal of Wooll, Stuffs, and Filth, cannot fail to give the Infection anew to some Persons; but it is better that should be now than in the Spring; this Work will decide every where whether the Plague be ceased. M. Bernard who commands at Alais, writes the 23d of January, that there were 32 sick that Day in the Infirmary of the Suburbs; and that two had newly fallen ill in the Town. M. de Vieussens Physician at Alais, writes the 26th of January, that from the 23d to the 26th, no more than three had fallen sick in the Town, and a Child of two Years old. M. de Fraisse the commanding Officer at Mende, in his of the 20th of January writes, that the Quarantain there was prolonged to the 27th, because the Perfumes necessary for the Disinfection were not yet provided in sufficient Quantity. Since the 14th eight Persons had died, and 10 had fallen ill; 26 were remaining in the Infirmary, 34 in the House for the recovering, and 42 performing Quarantain. Several Persons a-Day still die at Avignon, notwithstanding which the Distemper is considerably decreased there. Most of the other Places of the Comtat which were infected, are now well, or have but very few sick.

Paris, Jan. 21. The Infanta is expected this Night at Orleans, and 'tis believed will not arrive in this City before the 2d or 3d of the next Month. It is said that the Night before her coming hither, she is to lie at Berry, a Country Seat belonging to the Cardinal de Billy, three Leagues from hence; that she is to dine there the next Day, and that the Duke and Dutches of Orleans, accompanied with all the Princes and Princesses of the Blood, will set out thither to attend upon her. The King will go as far as Bourg la Reyne, and receive the Infanta as she alights from her Coach; and that after his Majesty has stayed with her some time at the House of M. Marechaid, he will return to this City, and that the Infanta attended by the Court are to follow immediately after his Majesty. The Roads from Bourg la Reyne to this City are to be lined with Guards, and that her Entrance into this City is to be performed with the utmost Magnificence.
